

These Air Conditioners were UNPROTECTED...

...Now They're GONE!

Air conditioners and heat pumps are stolen from houses and businesses just like yours every day, and sold for scrap or sold on the black market. What makes matters worse is the price of copper, which your air conditioner has a lot of, is going up and the punishment for copper theft is typically a fine and probation. Since 2005 the price of copper pipe and tubing has risen nearly 75%. Copper from one AC coil could get the thief $50-$100. AND What does a copper thief do to pay his fine? They steal your air conditioner!

Now the HVAC industry is using a new type of refrigerant which is not compatible with older systems. That means if your air conditioner is stolen, then you have to replace your exterior air conditioner unit AND the interior unit. For a small residence or business the typical cost of replacement is about $4,000.00. Oh, but you have insurance eh? Now, most insurance companies will only pay to replace a stolen air conditioner once and after that some insurance companies require you to have a theft detection system added in order to continue to cover the air conditioner.
